

OUR WORLD THROUGH THE BODY

Bounds, Reflections and Resonances

CALL FOR CONTRIBUTIONS

The scientific psychomotricity congress of the Annual Psychomotor Therapy Conference opens its 52nd edition in Mons on 19, 20 and 21 November 2026. It invites a journey: from the origins that shape human development to the societal challenges that question our identities and the rhythms by which we live.

Psychomotricity focuses on the body in relation, similar in its structure yet unique in its lived experience. A body that carries the traces of our emotions, our wounds and our encounters, reflecting both the intimate and the collective.

From birth onward, the infant unfolds on a foundational ground woven from gazes, touch and attunement. Yet this ground can be shaken by the acceleration of modern life, by trauma, by uprootings that challenge our identities and our presence in the world.

Psychomotricity offers an essential voice: that of a living, relational and creative body, capable of connection and transformation. Three guiding words accompany this congress: bounds, Reflections and Resonances, to explore and celebrate together A World in Body, in dialogue with professionals from here and elsewhere.

THEMATIC TRACKS

the body as the ground that supports development and enables connection.

Central question : How does the psychomotor therapist support the foundations of human development through safety, regulation and connection, while respecting the rhythms specific to each individual?

Keywords : First 1,000 days, education/prevention, safety, tonic-emotional regulation, rhythm, shared temporality, symbolisation, parental support, early intervention, bodily rooting, presence, slowness, breathing

the body as a place of resonance between the beneficiary who tells their story and the psychomotor therapist who echoes it.

Central question : How does the psychomotor therapist accompany experiences of rupture, exile and trauma, helping the body recover an internal rhythm and a sense of unity?

Keywords : rupture, exile, migration, loss of bearings, violence, trauma, bodily and symbolic reconstruction, cultural diversity, identity, belonging, inner rhythm, temporality of care, restoration, connection the body as a place of resonance between the beneficiary who tells their story and the psychomotor therapist who echoes it.

TO RISE:

Central question : How does the psychomotor therapist support processes of affirmation and (re)construction of identity, fostering presence to oneself in an accelerated and disembodied world?

Keywords: singularity, identity, gender, plural identities, disembodiment, virtuality, embodiment, relationship to the body, psychomotor training, professional stance, humanity, pace of the world, present moment, balance, connection

SUBMISSION GUIDELINES

Proposals must be submitted as a Word document (Times New Roman, font size 12, single spacing) to the Mons Organising Committee (OC) before
